Dear Member,

2011 was a turbulent year, causing so many look to the future with trepidation. Uncertain economic prospects, dwindling job opportunities, and rising inequality.

A legacy of high public and private debt is hurting economic prospects. The global financial system remains fragile.

IMF predicts growth in 2012 to slow even in the most vibrant parts of the world economy. Low-income countries will especially be vulnerable.

The reason why 2011 went so badly was perhaps due to a collective determination to reach a cooperative solution concerning Eurozone as well as US’s debt crisis. Policymakers, should not have let an old wound fester, and in doing so made the situation worse.

Let’s hope, 2012 to be a year of healing. Otherwise, the world could easily slide into a “1930s moment”. A moment where trust and cooperation break down. A moment, ultimately, leading to a downward spiral that could engulf the entire world.

Europe is at the center of concerns because of the extensive trade and financial linkages that bind everyone else to it.

IMF sees three imperatives for Europe—stronger growth, larger firewalls, and deeper integration. In euro area, measures should be taken to avoid growth to fall below target in 2012. Additional and timely monetary easing is important to reduce such risks.

Banks must be prevented from, contracting credit in the face of market pressure. Solutions should focus on raising capital levels—as the way to boost capital ratios.

In addition to Greece and Ireland, Italy and Spain, could potentially be forced into a solvency crisis by abnormal financing costs. This would have disastrous implications for systemic stability. Therefore must be avoided at all cost.

More risk sharing across borders in the banking system between sovereigns and banks is needed. Also European monetary union needs to be supported by financial integration in the form of unified supervision.

Although Europe is at the epicenter of the current crisis and thus key to the global outlook, other economies like US have at least as important a role in getting to a better outcome.

Countries with current account surpluses, whether advanced or emerging, also have a role to play—primarily by shifting to domestic demand to support global growth. China can help itself and the global economy by continuing to shift growth away from exports and investment, toward consumption.

The great political challenges face policymakers. There are frustrations in the rest of the world as they watch their recovery being blown off course by trouble in Europe, ust as they were picking up the pieces after the 2008 crisis. They wait for a resolution to this crisis that never seems to come. Financial regulation should remain on the policy agenda. We simply cannot carry on with the financial sector that gave us the global financial crisis. We need a safer and more stable financial system, one that serves rather than destabilizes the real economy.
The Management Committee (MC) has resolved to advice to the 27th GA on the selection of an audit firm to audit ADFIMI’s 2011 accounts, to select Vakıfbank to fill the permanent seat of Turkey vacated by the Development Bank of Turkey. The MC examined the SG Report, Audit Report for 2010 accounts, financial tables, and decided to recommend the GA to approve them. MC also decided to accept Export Development Bank of Egypt to Membership, and unanimously resolved to propose the 27th GA to confer ADFIMI Honourary membership to Br. Hossam Nasser for his services to ADFIMI and to HE Ali Babacan for his masterly governance of Turkish economy during the global crisis.

Honorary Membership conferred upon HE Ali Babacan

Deputy Prime Minister of Turkey for his masterly conduct of Turkish Economy during recent global economic crisis by the 27th general Assembly of ADFIMI.

About Ali Babacan:
Holding a BSc in Industrial Engineering and an MBA from USA Babacan began his career in finance as an associate at QRM, Inc. in Chicago, Illinois, a company doing financial consulting to the top executives of major banks in the United States. On his return to Turkey he became the chairman of his family owned textile company between 1994 and 2002. At the same time he served as chief advisor to the mayor of Ankara.
He entered politics in 2001 as a co-founder and a Board member of the Justice and Development Party and was elected to parliament in 2002. He was immediately appointed as the Minister of Economy as the youngest member of the cabinet, then at the age of 35.
Babacan had the duty to steer a painful economic reform program, which was backed by multi-billion-dollar IMF loans; with its help Turkish economy achieved a remarkable recovery after two severe crises. He always stayed away from the rough-and-tumble of the Turkish political arena and focused solely on the economic reform, acting rather as a technocrat without indulging into populism. He served in Erdoğan’s subsequent cabinets in various capacities and presently is the Deputy Prime Minister responsible for the economy. During the years that he commanded the economy, Turkey’s budget deficit of 12% in 2002 was reduced to 1,7% in 2011 and debt to GDP ratio was reduced from 74% to below 40% in the same period. Double digit inflation that was persistent for the past 34 years was reduced to single digit. Structural reforms including a robust banking system are also credited to him. Remarkable performance of Turkish economy, especially in 2011 registering a growth of 7% was hailed by international organizations.

ADFIMI welcomes Export Development Bank of Egypt (EDBE) to membership

Established in 1983 to develop Egyptian exports and support the establishment of the agricultural, industrial, trading and services export sectors, EDBE quickly became the main financing arm for the development of Egyptian exports. It gained confidence of exporters, owners of SMEs, and individuals, as well as the trust of local and international financial institutions. EDBE plays a pivotal role in supporting Egyptian exporters and facilitating the introduction of Egyptian products into global markets. Its primary means to this end include debt and equity finance to export oriented and import substitution projects, among other banking and financial services rendered to current and potential customers. EDBE founded the Export Credit Guarantee Company of Egypt which covers both commercial and non-commercial risks, especially “Factoring”.

Its management nourishes the principle of “commitment begets trust” at the heart of the bank’s culture.
